

~ October 2, 2023

THIS ISSUE'S HIGHLIGHT - LES ACTUALITÉS

Dr. Harriet de Wit (University of Chicago):
Microdosing: Fact or Fiction?

Dr. Gabriella Gobbi (McGill University): The psychopharmacology of psychedelics: where the brain meets the spiritual mind

Dr. Emma Hapke (University of Toronto):
Implementing psychedelics into clinical practice

Registration now open:
Departmental Day - Psychedelics:
Clinical Potential and Mechanisms

November 16 (12:00 - 17:30)
McGill Faculty Club

Drs. Emma Hapke, Gabriella Gobbi, Daniel
Zigman: Clinicians' Roundtable

Please pre-register to attend this in-person event. We look forward to seeing you on

!

Dr. Albert Garcia-Romeu (Johns Hopkins University): Psychedelic therapies as new frontiers in addiction treatment: state of the science

Register Now

LATEST NEWS - DERNIÈRES NOUVELLES

Call for Applications for Assistant Professor (Clinical)

The Department of Psychiatry and the Psychiatry Unit are currently inviting applications for a full-time position at the rank of Assistant Professor (Clinical) in Psychiatry. Apply here

IN THE SPOTLIGHT - EN VEDETTE

Dr. Janique Johnson-Lafleur, Assistant Professor

In this issue's Spotlight, we welcome Dr. Janique Johnson-Lafleur, who joined the Department of Psychiatry in May 2023 as a full-time Assistant Professor (Research).

Dr. Johnson-Lafleur received her PhD in transcultural psychiatry from McGill University and completed her postdoctoral and undergraduate training in anthropology at McGill University, and at Université de Montréal and Université Laval, respectively. She holds a researcher position at Sherpa University Institute, CIUSSS West-Montreal, a community-based research center dedicated to the study of primary healthcare and social services in intercultural contexts.

Her research program focuses on the perception and lived experiences of the different actors involved in the field of mental health and social services in Quebec, and on the practitioners' needs in terms of intercultural resources and training. She is also interested in art-based methods and the role of images and imagistic ways of knowing in transformative practices – both in clinical interventions and training initiatives. Her current work also investigates communities of practice as a training modality, the prevention of violent radicalization in socially polarized times, and Indigenous mental health and wellness. Her work relies on qualitative and mixed methods research designs and is inspired by participatory research principles and intersectional, anti-oppressive and decolonial approaches.

Dr. Johnson-Lafleur is available for research supervision of students in the fields of social science, psychology, social work, psychiatry, and public health.

UPCOMING EVENTS - ÉVÉNEMENTS À VENIR

October 2 (11:00 - 12:00)

October 19 (15:30 - 17:30)

Neuroscience for Mental Health Lecture

CPA Annual Conference

The Canadian Psychiatric Association (CPA) 73rd Annual Conference will be held in-person in Vancouver. The annual conference is a key opportunity to explore new perspectives, reconnect with colleagues and learn from the passions of others in the field of psychiatry.

Details and registration
